It Is Time To Live Beyond The Bulb.

Great lighting takes more than a beautiful chandelier. It takes a holistic layering of light that supports your biological rhythms, compliments the geometry of your architecture, and simplifies the technology you need to make it all happen.

Better living isn't achieved by changing your light bulb. It's achieved by changing the light itself.

In the hundreds of homes our team has designed, we have made linear lighting a vibrant source of beauty, change and delight. From mountain retreats to the simplest of homes, we continue to find exciting new ways to use linear lighting...

...Because no other light source delivers so many benefits, making every space glare- and shadow-free and bringing every architectural element to light.

Wake gently, flow throughout your day, and then rest deeply, always with the right light, in the right place, at the right time.

—David Warfel, acclaimed lighting designer

The Evolution of Light

The world is always evolving around us, and we adapt to thrive within it. And just as our homes have continued to adapt to support the ways we work, entertain, and stay active, lighting has evolved, as well—beyond traditional recess lights and decorative fixtures—to create layers of light that you feel more than see—using linear lighting.

Finding the Right Light

The quality of light impacts your quality of life—starting with your circadian rhythms and ending with the feel of your home.

That's why being able to tune your environment to the rhythm of your life with seamless, high-performance lighting is critical to your space.

In the Right Place

Ceiling lights create harsh glare and light mostly themselves and the floor. But indirect lighting makes it easier for your eyes and puts light wherever you need it most so you can always focus on whatever the next moment brings—from setting the tone for your favorite movie to turning your walk-in closet into the perfect runway for your day.

At the Right Time

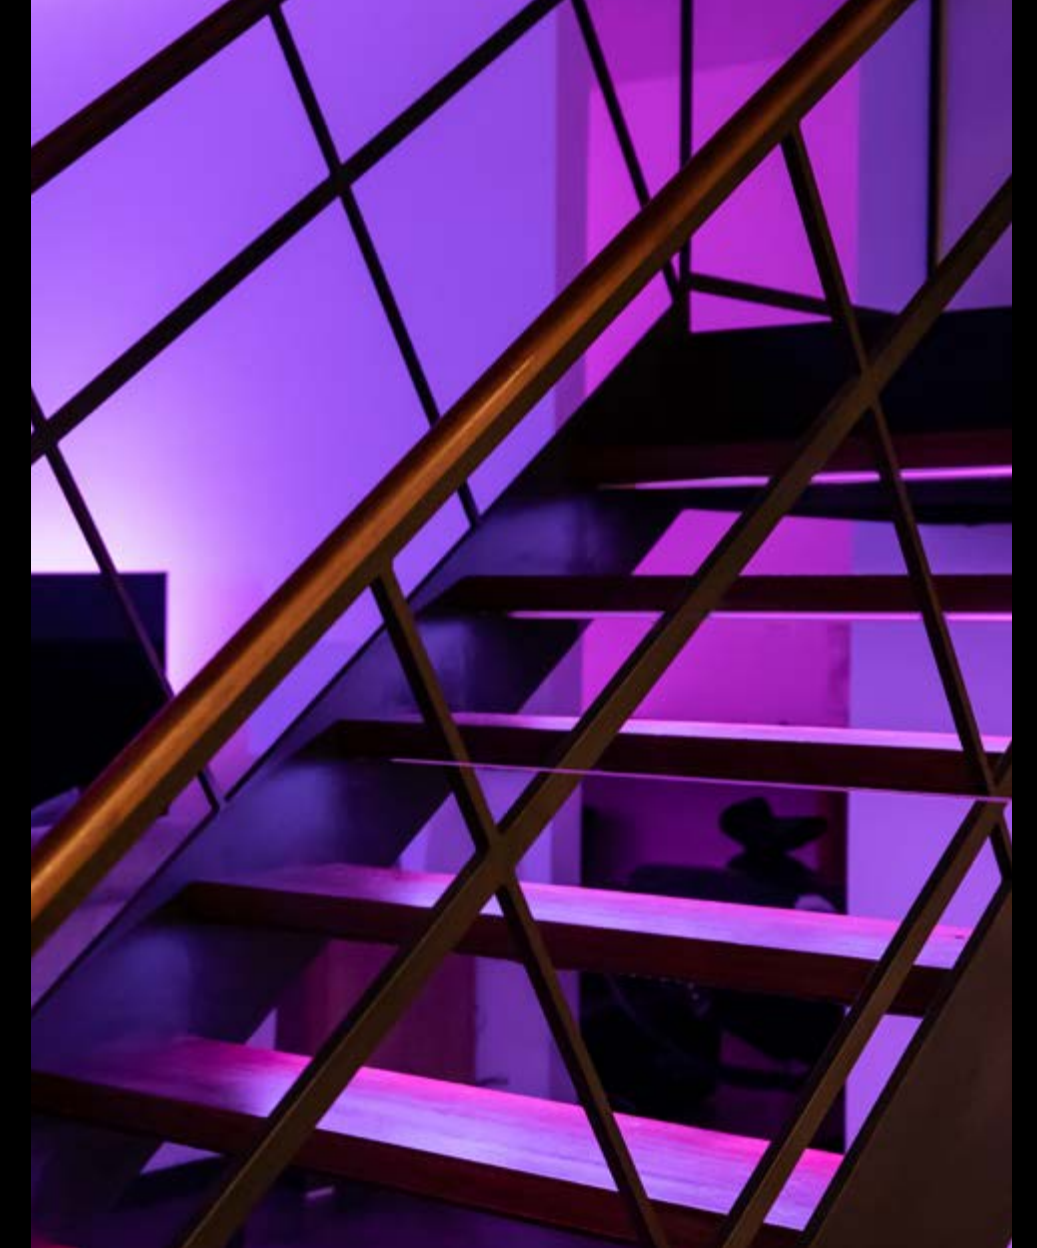

Adaptive lighting enables you to automate your space to match your routines—from your mornings to your workdays, from your workouts to your wind-downs.

With dynamic personalized settings, you can customize your home to light every moment of your day from morning to evening.

Control4 Makes It Easy

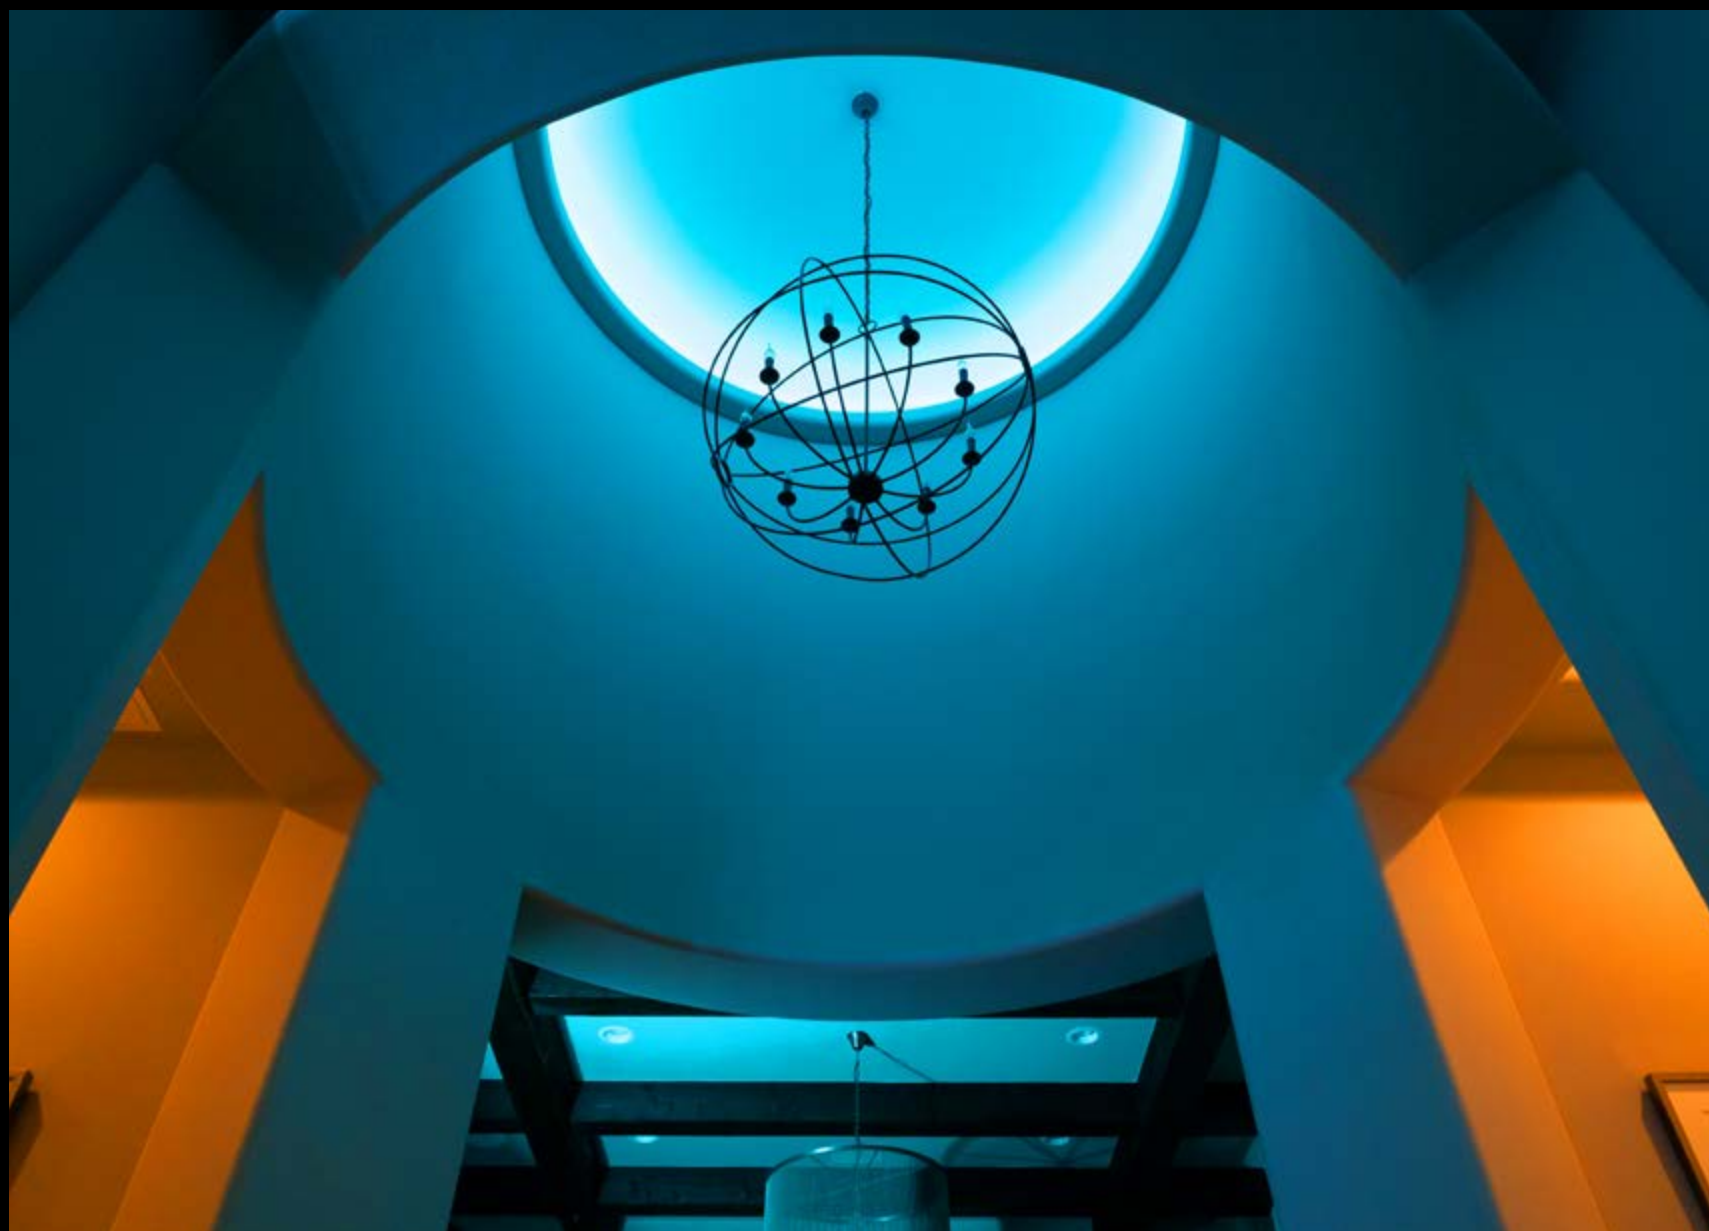

Personalize your lighting your way. And change your lights to fit every moment in your life.

Adjust your lighting to reflect every mood with the sound of your voice, phone, touch screen, or button on the wall.

Now, more than ever, the perfect lighting is always within your reach.
